Letter from the Editor

Hello soup lovers,

What is soup, really? Maybe soup is a food. In that case, this is our food issue. We're like the Palmier, but better. Like. . . the Palmiest.

Maybe soup is an acronym. It stands for:

S - straw

O - out in the aquarium,

U - u are ready to slurp forbidden seafood chowder (fish tank),

P - probably forcibly removed from the aquarium.

Maybe soup is actually the most untouched section of Dewick and Carm. Who in their right mind goes to the dining hall, spends a meal swipe and says, "This would be a great time to eat soup." Nah, that would be soup-id.

Maybe soup is a little dude. Here, I'll draw him right now:

i'm soup

(he's shy)

Or, maybe soup is all of these things, mixed in with the love and care of a funny little comedy magazine.

Ain't that a kick in the head?

Tour Guide

By Lillian Kirk

Welcome prospective students, we're so excited to have you back at Tufts! After a long, slumb'ry sojourn, students are getting settled in their nests, so consider this article your guide to campus.

Tufts campus itself was founded on the border of Medford and Somerville because there is what's known as a faerie rift between the two cities, which demarcated the border between two ancient factions of fae in the early 19th century. Jumbo, our most dear and glorious founder, wisely sought out such a prime spot to secure the best alchemy program in any American institution. Time has since passed, and alchemy as a study has gone out of fashion, having been officially dropped as a major in 1920 after a scandal costing tens of thousands of deaths on the Western Front. Our proud alchemist heritage may not be present on campus today, but the faerie rift remains! Here are all the locations that you may find useful when navigating around campus:

Pearson:

The chemistry building used to house all the alchemy classes and as such is the most magically unstable spot on campus. This has been patched over by a happy robot on the back, but the front remains a facade that envelops all the air around it. This heavy, oppressive feeling slowly leeches off the auras from passersby who're late to their next class and looking for a shortcut, too foolish to realize that their essence is being stored within the bowels of Pearson.

Legend has it that when the moon is full and she has leached enough aura from Tufts students, Pearson will explode and let out the faerie folk from their long slumber beneath the Tufts campus, whereupon they will have their revenge for the theft of their homeland and eternal imprisonment. This is, of course, only a story: Pearson is designed to implode (so as not to harm the students outside the building) in the case of such an event.

Aidekman:

The Aidekman basement is home to a series of portals that transport you across space. If you are trying to find a practice room under Granoff, do not be surprised when, after long hours of fruitless searching for a room, you exit out of the Jackson Gym. This is to be expected, and any classes that are underneath Granoff, Aidekman, or Jackson will excuse any absence if you email the professor saying "I was lost in the tunnels."

If, however, you are running late to another class, with a little bit of trial and error you can learn which portals link to different exits all around campus. I live in Granoff, for example, and I always have that one class in Olin every semester. I simply walk downstairs to the practice room (the exact room rotates with the phases of the moon) and turn left into the wall, which leads me to the 3rd floor of Olin every time. There are even portals that lead off campus, which are helpful for sending students off on field research and bringing rock samples for geology classes. It is also where the Quidditch pitch is located because there is no room on campus for it.

That grate in front of Olin that is always steaming:

The Ninja Turtles live down there. They are currently microwaving pizza.

The Realm of the Dead:

This is the space between the back of Aidekman and the basketball court on top of the parking garage. This is where the dead souls of Tufts students lie. They are restless, so it is good practice to hold your breath while traversing to avoid possession. They say that no one has ever emerged from there alive, which is not entirely true. If you make eye contact, you join the dead, so do not take your eyes off of your feet as you slowly trudge to God knows where. If you look up, all is lost, but there have been those who, by taking proper precautions, have made it with only mild trauma.

It occurs to me that I am mostly writing this guide to help cope with my crippling agoraphobia. Huh.

Acorn Head:

The acorn head is the last remnant of the Tufts Zamboni mascot who was caught in the midst of interdimensional travel. He was ready to exit the portal when his thicc frame did not fit, and the only thing that could escape was his bronzèd noggin. The rift closed with his head still out. We keep his head on the ground where it fell as a memorial. Poor bugger.

Unfortunately, the Tufts administration does not view Acorn Head's grassy patch as its own wonderific location deserving of our respect for all he's done for our fair university. Acorn head is incorrectly considered a part of Eaton and therefore subject to renovations. As such, he currently resides in a box with no airholes. Although he can hold his breath for multiple years, life in a box is lonely. Acorn Head was instrumental in subduing the Great Goblinquake of 1974, a valued member of Tufts Symphony Orchestra, protector of campus, and dear friend to all campus bunnies. He does not deserve such treatment and should be freed henceforth!

Lane:

The dinosaur footprint in the top floor of Lane is a time portal. This is similar to the Aidekman basement, but this portal unfortunately leads to a particularly wintry evening in the Cretaceous period. But, it can be used if you are really late for a class and are willing to wait around for millions of years. Dinosaurs have occasionally escaped from the footprint, which is why TUPD is always circling Lane hall. TUPD stands for Tufts UnderPaid Dinosaurs (no relation to TUPD, the overpaid police department). Sometimes, when you are a dinosaur without a safety net, the university picks you up, gives you a job, promises benefits that they don't deliver on, and suddenly you are expected to be at their beck and call to hunt down the university's enemies for not even a living wage.

Hopefully, with this guide, you may avoid magical mishaps and maybe like, not die? Dying's bad. Would not recommend. You may have chosen a university with a campus intent on killing you, but, uh, now you know how you're gonna die?

Cheers!

My Half-Semester Study Abroad in Marlborough, MA

By James Smith

This semester, I got an unexpected opportunity to study abroad in the exotic Marlborough, MA (pronounced MAH-boh-roh, Mass in the local language). It's around a 30-minute drive, so I made sure to download a bunch of ebooks for the trip! I went in the typical Ford Focus instead of a plane, to get the true Marlborough experience.

I tried the staple food called "chickie tendies," which translates to "chicken tenders" in English. They're very crispy and taste good with a sauce called "ketchup," which is made with tomatoes and vinegar. What a foreign combination!

One thing that I did not expect was the lack of a soft-serve machine. We are so lucky in Medford/Somerville to have the privilege of proper ice-cream dispensing, which is essential to good health.

The host family was very friendly and treated me like I was a part of the family. They even insisted that I come back every year for Thanksgiving and Christmas. The mom exclaimed: "James, did you get a concussion out there? I'm your mother!" What nice people.

It was a lot of work speaking in another language, especially since there are no Rs, but I feel like I'm really immersed in the local language and culture. We took a trip down to "Mom's basement," which is apparently a rarely visited part of Marlborough, MA.

Studying abroad really gives a person perspective, and I'd like to personally thank President Monaco for allowing us to have this enriching experience.

Tufts Zamboni Ranks.....

Dora the Explorer Characters!!!

We all love Dora the Explorer. The hit fourth-wall-breaking animated series of the 2000s taught us Spanish, counting, and other essential life skills.

When I was ten, I was riding the bus home from school and explaining to a classmate my excitement for a Dora the Explorer special. The episode featured Swiper in a larger role (hence my excitement). He asked why I still watched Dora at 10 and disengaged from the conversation. I resented that. Now, I rank the characters from best to worst.

1. Swiper. This guy was the best. The antagonist of the series was always trying to mess up Dora's adventures. He wore a bandana and gloves (no other clothes). He was sneaky, sly, and a good guy deep down despite his kleptomaniac tendencies. Swiper got so caught up in the idea of winning, he forgot to follow his heart.

2. Boots. A talking monkey. Need I say more? Boots wore red boots and was always so goofy. Quirky and a charming sidekick. Without Boots, Dora the Explorer never would've gotten so popular.

3. Big Red Chicken. A chicken who was big and red. Comically large animals are always a hit and Big Red Chicken is a testament to that.

4. Backpack. Positive and upbeat, no one could keep the spirits of ol' backpack down. Backpack is purple (top 3 color imo).

5. Grumpy Old Troll. Look at him. Why does he look like that? He's so goofy. He's just so grumpy and cantankerous. I love him.

6. Map. Constantly anxious, which is relatable. The Map song goes unbelievably hard. The Dora Explorer wiki says he likes rapping and parties.

7. Saorsie Ronan. Understated but loud. Quirky but relatable. Terrific actress. Stars in critically-acclaimed movies such as Lady Bird and Little Women.

8. Tico. Look at this unusually large squirrel. Look at his vest. When I started this list, Tico slipped my mind. However, I realized Tico was always severely underrated and we should have appreciated him while he was still with us. He will be missed.

9. Abuela. The matriarch of the Marquez family cannot be stopped. A caring grandmother and a delightful cook. We love her.

10. Fiesta Trio. These little bug guys played the score to Dora's life. I don't see enough love for the Fiesta Trio. Like the whole reason why Dora was so cool was because they had a "We Did It!" song. Thanks Fiesta Trio.

11. Diego. Dora's cousin. It was pointed out to me that Go Diego Go! respected its audience more than Dora. This is so true. I imagine that Dora is very social at the Marquez family gatherings and Diego is like the nice quiet himbo who just waddles around and talks to animals all night. Like Kristoff in Frozen 2. For that, I respect him.

12. Mami Marquez. A rock of Dora's life. An archaeologist (cool). The motivation behind Dora's adventures.

13. Benny the Bull. I don't even know what to say about good ol' Benny. He's a bull. He's kinda clumsy which is cool. His character design walked the line of wholesome and deeply unsettling tbh.

14. Dora. Hot take, I know. Dora is our guide. She's so lively and always ready for an adventure. Like Dora's cool, but she's not the most interesting character in a show with an anxious anthropomorphic map and a talking monkey. She also gets a little bit pestering at times. Like, Dora, I know where Swiper is. He's right behind you.

15. Señor Toucan. Everyone needs a Senor Toucan in their lives. The wise but feisty grandpa. However, he is unfortunately the third best Toucan character in animated media, behind Zazu and Toucan Sam.

16. Val the Octopus. Val's got tentacles and can hold many items at a time as a result. Val's a little bit wacky and quirky.

17. The Trains. They were all different colors. Two of them were green and blue (I like those colors). Azul is the best of them.

18. Isa the Iguana. I literally have no recollection of an Iguana character. Like who is this?

19. Explorer Stars. Ok sure I guess. I don't really remember their deal.

20. Papi Marquez. Dora's father. He's a good guy.

Bad Soup

Matzoh Cock and Balls

It's not a Tuesday, but it's Tuesday vibes, but like, the Tuesday of a long weekend. But not the last day of the weekend. It's a long weekend and Wednesday is also free, so you're moderately big chilling. It did have biology vibes, which makes sense because it was soup, and biology vibes do not make for a good soup. It was a small tiddy day. The tiddies were miniscule, but the nipples were large... temporarily. Upon consuming the soup, the nipples fell off the body. My mom ordered me soup from a deli in Cambridge :(

Lemme preface this by: water tastes bad. Water has never helped no one. If I had to choose between water and being bitten by a very angry panda, I would choose the panda. Soup is what water could've been in a better world. Water wants to be soup, but it's in its third year of community college and failed all its classes and it's like, "should I do it all again, or should I have followed my dad's advice and gone to trade school? So like, hmm, I could be a plumber right now, but now I'm taking my third year of community college. Am I gonna be an assistant manager at Sephora? What's the vibe?" That's what water is asking itself and to this day, has never left the community college. Underwhelming. Disappointing. Pathetic.

This soup is basically water with one large matzoh ball in it that tastes like cardboard, but not in a good way. Cardboard can be good when you want the crunch. Or if you're on a hamster vibe, and you wanna nibble on some cardboard. We've all been there. But this matzoh ball was not there. This matzoh was distinctly, and I think maliciously, not a hamster.

So this soup was almost water, in the way that could've been something better. And then it wasn't. That's when I pulled my cock out, and that pain turned to pleasure. Matzoh cock and balls. But I wish this soup tasted like cock. If it tasted like sweaty balls, it would've been preferable. An ideal soup is like a lesbian's sweaty balls. And this soup was watery. SPIRO! This soup was on spironolactone, and I think I might be able to salvage this mentally. But this soup was not on spiro per se. It is too devoid of substance. It was unnatural. It had everything it needed for success and chose wrong deliberately on every turn.

I should've poured milk in the soup, if I had 5% milk, it would've been saved. I need to go to CVS later tonight, I might save the next soup. This soup could've been. It doesn't have my begrudging respect either. It couldn't have been great, but it could've been anything else, and it chose to be unfathomably bad. You know, like the cartouche, like the oval that you put around the pharaoh's name to protect them from demons. This soup needed a cartouche because of the demons I'm sending after it. The world would have been better without this soup and it should feel ashamed. I feel ashamed for consuming even a spoonful of it. It has been four weeks. It has finally been removed from my fridge. I have lost the ability to feel remorse.

Application to be a frat wing woman

By Alpha Beta Cock

Dear any and all interested fraternity brothers,

I am a bored student who wants to improve the social scene on campus. I am here to offer my services to you as a professional wing woman. Since most of you can't get anyone at all, being seen in my general vicinity will really up your chances of another girl being interested in looking at you, and maybe even talking to you. I will make sure that you look much more appealing to the groups of girls that come into your frat house to get alcohol and leave. You're welcome.

You will see that I have a great deal of experience and applicable skills. For one, I know how to have conversations with men (not sure if I can say the same for y'all when it comes to women). I will teach you guys how to speak to girls without getting scared and running away or immediately starting talking about something that no one cares about, like sports.

I will also work on improving your confidence to go up and talk to girls. "You can do it, Chad! Finally talk to the girl who's been in your econ class for an entire semester and always says hi, but you don't say hi back! It's not that hard!" As you can see, I am very motivational.

More about me: I am charming, funny, charismatic, and sometimes constipated. I love short walks on the beach and long walks off a short pier. You will find me a great addition to every party, barbecue, and group orgy¹ (I want to be in the middle!). Please let me know if my wing woman skills seem impressive enough for your dumb asses. I will hang out with you guys in exchange for free beer.

Looking forward to your response!

XOXO

¹ A group orgy is defined as the set of college students with the binary operation acting on two members and resulting in a third member which should ideally join the threesome. It is associative because no matter the starting pair, the sex will be euphoric. It has an identity element for every element a as $a \cdot e = a$ if we define e to be Greg, who is simply a bad lay. It has an inverse element because if anyone were to masturbate, (that is to say $a \cdot a$) Greg will surely be there, the creep! In some college campuses, this group can be generated by a single element because they are always in an orgy involving the entire campus. A group orgy should not be confused with a singular orgy, which happens every Tuesday from 5-6pm in the Ballou basement staff lounge. See JumboLife for details.

Oh soup,
With your silky noodles, pillowy gnocchi,
And circle carrot slices that would be fit for hockey.

And like in a hockey match,
The sight of your celery stick,

My dear darling soup,
If you would be so kind,
To lend me your bowl for some carnal time.

Soup,
I'm not asking lightly,
When I ask you to caress my Richard ever so slightly...

Let me fuck the soup.

A Cry for Help

I contain multiple crocogators in my back pocket. I am afeared of crocogators and their reptilian kin. They are spooky. They are scary. And I am but a weak and fragile toad. My pockets. They shudder in fear. I have. Regrets. Many of them. Please save me.

I would pull them out of my pockets myself, but they snap and try to eat me and make me all sad on the inside whenever I try. They have been with me as long as I can remember. I have never gotten a full night's rest. Crocogators snore. I haven't been able to use my pockets and I am but a humble toad who cannot lift a purse, so carrying personal effects has been a struggle. I am in need. Of assistance. I do not like crocogators. Please help.

I once had an aunt who was a crocogator. Then she divorced my uncle and has not been in contact with the family, so I am reticent to call her my aunt, especially as I never knew her growing up. This does not contribute to my fear of crocogators. It is just a fun fact about me. Please, somebody. Remove these crocogators. From my trousers.

The Man who Loved Soup

By also Anti-Soup girl

there once was a lad who loved soup
but when he ate it, he could not poop
he was in bliss
all he did was piss
until he died from too much

Sweet Potato Raisin

Finding out you're colorblind by missing a stoplight

Getting pulled over for running a (red?) light

Getting into a "violent altercation" with a cop

Being found guilty of "vehicular manslaughter" (still don't understand how my lawyer managed to convince the jury it wasn't intentional when I hit the fucker four times)

Missing parole for "not having regrets"

Not being able to see our daughter grow up, or see your face again, or even get a letter back. I miss you and I am sorry that I can't be with you. I'm sorry that I caused you pain before I left, and I'm sorry that I can't fix it from here. I'm not sorry I ran over that cop. Bastard deserved it.²

Chicken noodle

A Soupy Poem :3

By William Soupspeare

When the soup hits...

I contain soup
Soup is gud
When I grow up
I want to be a soup

Vanilla soup,
Chocolate soup,
Stwabewwy soup,
Are all gud soup.

I once ran a soup stand
I didn't make any money.
Now I am souplless
You can't give out soup anymore in this economy

If I had a soup,
Then I would be
Unstoppable
But I don't.

But I am soup
Why am I selling soup if I am soup
Wait, if I am soup and I ran out of soup
Where did I go

Aaaaaaaaaaaaa
Aaaaaaaa
Aaa
Aaaaaaaaaaa

I am being consumed
I don't like being soup
The life expectancy
Is too low

When you are soup

I require your bones

Give them to me

I hunger
